100% natural Shea butter blended with grapeseed oil and other natural oils to give a smooth creamy feel. Just Jameen Creamy Shea Butter can be used on your body or in your hair.

EBONI Blend

Is a mixture of our creamy Shea with our Just Jameen Lotion. At the request of many of our customers, this combination is wonderful for dry skin when you need extra oil from the Shea but want the silky after feel of the Just Jameen Lotion.

Eucalyptus & Peppermint Spray

This spray was originally a foot spray, however many customers have given us other uses for the spray. Spray in the air to ease congested breathing (be careful not get the spray in yours or others eyes) Spray over the body before you go out in the garden or on a picnic to repel bugs that bite. If you get bite by a bug spray directly on the bite and rub in to prevent swelling and itching.

Soy Candle (container)

Our candles are made of 100% Well-Flake Soy Wax is comprised of 100% natural botanical oils. Well-Flake Soy Wax has excellent fragrance holding qualities and produces candles with a beautiful cold scent and a clean burn with less soot than typical paraffin waxes

Soy Blend Candles (Pillar and floaters)

Soy & Beeswax mix

Information you should know. Just Jameen promotes healthy skin and hair. We do not use petroleum, mineral oils or alcohol in our lotion products. We do not use petroleum in any of our products!

Skin Suicide

Beautiful skin radiates from moisture. Yet the two most common skin-detrimental ingredients, mineral oil and alcohol, have the opposite effect of moisturizing the skin. Oil encourages the skin to produce even more oil, and alcohol leads to dehydration. This common 'skin-care' combo actually speeds up the aging process.

MINERAL OIL is the cheapest, most universally-used ingredient in skin care. Made from petroleum, it cannot be absorbed by the body. It "seals" the skin, clogs pores, attracts dirt and pulls essential trace minerals from the skin. It must be removed with harsh alcohol. PETROLATUM, also called paraffin jelly or petroleum jelly, is also made from petroleum and is very similar to mineral oil.

ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (SD Alcohol) is a harsh and poisonous solvent - that is also derived from petroleum. It is used to dissolve built-up wax and mineral oils on the skin - the ingredients of most skin-care products. It also dissolves the body's own natural moisturizers, leaving skin dry. In fact, it destroys the skin's pH balance.

Good Food. Great Skin.

While it seems obvious that good nutrition does great things for your insides, did you know it works wonders on your skin as well? Your skin is a reflection of your inner health, and when you take care of yourself, your skin looks good. Some nutrients that are beneficial to the skin need to be consumed through diet or nutritional supplements, while others are more effective when applied to the skin. In his book The Perricone Prescription, Dr. Nicholas Perricone outlines three elements for long-lasting healthy skin:

1. A healthy diet;
2. Nutritional supplements; and
3. A skin care regimen with natural food-based nutrients.

If we follow this outline, Dr. Perricone says, "Although we cannot stop the progression of the years, we can stop skin from wrinkling, sagging, and dulling." So make the commitment to great skin and face up to what you eat.

Glycemic Index

It's an index that rates foods from 1 to 100. High glycemic foods rate above 50 on the glycemic index and indicate a rapid increase in blood sugar levels. For example, watermelon is not as good for your skin as a handful of peanuts. Watermelon rates a whopping 72 on the glycemic index versus 14 for peanuts. Foods high on the glycemic index are bad for your skin because they rapidly increase your blood sugar levels, leading to a process known as glycation, which causes the loss of skin elasticity and the breakdown of collagen.

Nicholas Perricone, M.D. says, "When glycation occurs in the skin, the ultimate effect is not unlike tanning a hide. Over time, skin begins to resemble a cross between beef jerky and an old boot."

(Perricone, Nicholas, M.D.
The Perricone Prescription. Harper Collins: New York, 2002.)

Melaleuca Oil

Scientific Name: Tea Tree Oil

Other Names: Oleum Melaleucae, TTO

Note: Taking tea tree oil by mouth may cause possibly serious side effects such as confusion, loss of muscle control, or coma.

Prices effective April 1, 2011

Even small amounts of tea tree oil may be harmful if swallowed by young children or household pets. Using tea tree oil orally is not recommended due to these risks.

Tea tree oil is applied topically as an anti-infective agent. It has been shown effective for bacterial infections (such as acne), fungal infections (such as athlete's foot), and viral infections (such as cold sores). It contains chemicals known as terpenes, which may damage or kill infectious organisms, while having little or no negative effect on bacteria that normally live on the skin. Because tea tree oil is generally non-irritating, it is also used to relieve mild burns, insect bites, sunburn, and other relatively minor skin conditions.

In dentistry, tea tree oil has been used to kill bacteria in the mouth before dental surgery and to relieve mouth soreness caused by dental procedures. It has also been included in vaginal suppositories to treat vaginal infections. Steam produced when tea tree oil is added to boiling water, nebulizers, or hot baths may be inhaled to relieve nose, throat, and lung irritation. In studies of patients who suffered from oral candidiasis, a fungal infection of the mouth and throat, mouth rinses containing tea tree oil have shown some effectiveness in reducing symptoms. It may also be included in dandruff shampoos.

Shea Butter

Shea butter has soothing, moisturizing and protecting effects. Due to the presence of a sizeable quantity of unsaponifiable fats, its content in vitamins and other active elements, Shea butter adds other more precise activities to these general properties. It displays a protecting role against UV rays because of its content in cinnamic acid and can thus be incorporated in solar products. The natural latex contained in Shea butter would moreover prevent certain sun allergies. Shea butter also helps cell regeneration and capillary circulation. This favors the healing of small wounds, skin cracks and crevices, and skin ulcers. In the cosmetic field, this property is an asset against skin aging. It has restructuring effects on the epidermis, also on dry and fragile hair. Dry skin, dermatitis, dermatoses, eczema, sun burn, and burns are all helped by natural Shea butter. It has an anti-elastics characteristic which makes it a good active ingredient against stretch marks. Shea butter can also be used to treat rheumatism and aching muscles, and to ease colds because it decongests nasal mucous tissues. It is very well tolerated by the skin for it does not normally trigger any allergic reaction and can even be used on very sensitive skin areas such as mucous tissues and around the eyes.
